

Orland Sophomores To Stage Play

If you like fun there's a double helping in "A Bunch of Fun" to be presented June 2nd in the Orland School Auditorium. We can think of all sorts of reasons why you should see "A Bunch of Fun". It possesses plenty of rib tickling lines. Music it has and romance for all. A farce in three acts and what a farce! It is written by Erasm Osgood. What would you do if you were Reverend Grandon, respectable and peace loving pastor of the Heatherdale church when out of a clear sky a group of the younger generation descends upon you. Amusing, pathetic and full of life. You'll like the way kindly old Rev. Grandon handles the ticklish situations. Christina, a Swedish maid, is totally unaware that she is saying or doing anything funny. And who by the way, if she, knew how funny she was wouldn't believe it. And you'll find in Mrs. Blair, something of your next door neighbor, who was the busiest body that ever happened. Your heart will warm toward Mrs. Grandon who becomes flustered only on certain occasions. The whole world loves a lover and Ray, a born Romeo, is no exception. Lynn plays clown to everyone's delight, and when he and Christina get together they create many a ticklish situation. By all means see a "Bunch of Fun". The players guarantee that you will not suffer from the blues after seeing it. By failing to do so you will lose a chance to laugh and grow fat.

Mokena Schools News

The first and second grades have started a very interesting weight project. On a large chart they have pasted small individual houses made of orchid and yellow construction paper. Each child has his or her name on it, with their weight after each month. In the chimney of the house is the number they should weigh according to height and age. The chart is labeled "Our Weight Houses. Watch Our Weight."

Elvin Lundin, a pupil in the second grade, has moved to Chicago. Russell and Gerald Bennett brot two large rabbits to school. The entire school as well as Miss Doig's room enjoyed watching them the past week. The first and second grades enjoyed feeding them and taking care of them. Stories and sentences were made about the rabbits and a song was learned.

The first and second grade have been dramatizing the stories of the "Three Bears" and "Three Billy Goats". They are practicing the story of "Little Red Ridinghood" and the "Little Red Hen" now.

The pupils of the fifth grade each wrote a letter to Jack Horras for their language lesson. This helped to make Jack feel happier during his illness.

The intermediate room has a new spelling chart. If everyone in the class has one hundred in spelling the class will receive a gold star. Each class is trying to get the most number of stars.

The eighth grade has been studying figures and each pupil has made a poster of one. Above the blackboards in the front of the room, the line of posters displays trapezoids, circles, spheres, boxes, squares, cylinders, cones, triangles, etc. Each is in light brown mounted on blue. On each in blue is printed the formula for finding the volume or area of the surface of the figure. They seem to help fix the ideas in the minds of the pupils and good work is the result.

The grade school is entered in a track meet at Lockport, on May 21. The grade school and high school are both entered in a track meet at Manhattan on May 26. On the evening of May 26th the declamatory contest will also be held at Manhattan.

Prosperity on the Move Again

That much-talked of "prosperity corner" has been turned, at least in one particular, as evidenced in the shipment of 16 cars of household refrigerators valued at over $175,000, which is scheduled to pass through Mokena this week over the Rock Island Lines, destined for California. These cars are a part of five special trains which left Muskegon, Michigan on Saturday from the Rollator plant of the Norge Corporation and described as "the biggest consignment of household refrigerators ever moved at one time from a single plant in the history of the industry." The Pacific Coast shipment goes to Los Angeles and San Francisco. The entire movement from Muskegon plant has been operating day and night with a production of about 15 cars every 24 hours. Additional shipments for the middle western states are to follow.

What Is Scouting?

Scouting knows no race or creed or class. Troops are found alike in Catholic Parish, Jewish Synagogue and Protestant Church. It is available to farm or city alike. It is found in schools—it serves the rich as it serves the poor. Its aim is to help each of these boys to become the best citizen that he can make of himself.

His "Daily Good Turn" to some one is the Scout's effort to help the other fellow to also make the best of himself.

Each year new thousands upon thousands of boys join SCOUTING. They find not only fun, but also a real chance to BE something more.

Every boy really wants to "Make Good"—to amount to something—to be of value in life. The ideals of our great Americans like Washington and Lincoln and Roosevelt and Wilson (and other) stir us all to ambition and the desire to be REAL MEN.

DO YOU PLAY HERE OR HERE—?

The May safety poster, just released by the Chicago Motor Club to approximately 39,000 schoolrooms in Illinois and Indiana, stresses the difference between safe and dangerous playgrounds.

Approximately one-sixth of all traffic accidents, occur by reason of children playing in the street.

LATE in the NIGHT

The wife of a farmer living several miles from Momence, Illinois, became seriously ill. Having no telephone, the farmer brought a neighbor to remain with his wife and two small children, while he hurried to a distant farmhouse to telephone the doctor. Fortunately, the delay did not prove serious, although the doctor arrived none too soon. The nearness of tragedy so impressed the farmer that his first act next day was to order a telephone installed in his home. Frequently the telephone saves property and even life itself. Not only is it a protection, but also an everyday necessity in the business of farming. What else on the farm does so much for so little money?

ROBEY RACES

OPEN SUNDAY

With several big league drivers staging comebacks from near-fatal accidents which befell them last year, others ambitious for that lucky first-race-of-the-season victory and still others getting their first "break" in the major racing circuit, one of the most thrilling auto races in the history of the Robey-Chicago Speedway is predicted for the open next Sunday, May 8.

A pre-race poll has placed Billy Arnold, Chicago hero of the roaring road whom famous Barney Oldfield calls "the greatest driver of all times", as favorite to win the laurels. Billy will stage a comeback from the near-fatal wreck which snatched victory from him at Indianapolis last year. Arnold has made every preparation to roar across the finish line ahead of the pack.

While Arnold is the favorite, his edge is slight, for the man mountain Deacon Litz, known as "Primo Carrera of the Racing Fraternity" because of his size, will go to the starting line to see that the 1930 champion is held in check. Also, "Wild Bill" Cummings, winner of the 100 mile race at Roby last year and fifth at Indianapolis will make his bid for honors with Frank Brisko, Ira Hall, Johnny Sawyer, Benny Benefiel, Jack Petticoat, "Whiz" Sloan and other big timers.

Because of the record list of entries, B. Ward Beam, operator of the mile Speedway, announced that it will be necessary to run off qualifying trials to choose the fastest cars. The trials will begin at 10 A. M., furnishing plenty of thrills for the several thousand fans expected to meet the gate-opener in the early morning.

A new speedway will greet Roby fans Sunday. The track has been completely resurfaced, promising faster speeds and paving the way for new records. New grandstands have also been erected to accommodate the record crowds.

The Roby-Chicago Speedway is located at 108th and Indianapolis Blvd. on route 41, near Hammond, Indiana. In case of a rainout, the race will be run Sunday, May 15.

ESKIMOS ADOPTING WAYS OF WHITE MAN

Tribes of the North Turn to Trapping and Trading.

Washington.—The Eskimo, according to dispatches from the Far North, is slowly changing. Each year more and more of these remote guardians of the last frontier are adopting white man's ways.

In Alaska and western Canada many Eskimos have broken away from hunting and fishing to meet personal food and clothing wants and have become trappers and traders. In Greenland and northern Labrador the Eskimo has clustered around the mission stations, adopting the white man's style of house, rather than sod huts, igloos and skin tents, and bartering skins for the white man's canned foods, firearms, clothing and phonographs.

"The Eskimos were the first people met by Europeans on American shores, but they are still among the least known, and certainly the least seen, of all native American tribes," says a bulletin from the National Geographic society. "Scandinavians came in contact with Eskimos in Greenland and in Labrador in the Tenth and Eleventh centuries. Since that time the Eskimos' main contacts with the white man have been through explorers, missionaries, police officers, and occasional trappers and prospectors.

"The name Eskimo is said to have been given by Biard in 1611 (in the form 'Excomminguois'). It means 'eaters of raw fish.'

"Considering their limited numbers, the Eskimos cover a tremendous range. The total Eskimo population of the world has been estimated at only 35,000, but Eskimo villages can be found here and there throughout the coasts of Arctic America from eastern Greenland and northern Labrador to the westernmost parts of Alaska, and even on the tip of Asia across the Bering strait.

"Throughout this distance, more than 5,000 miles, the Eskimo speaks one language, a strange tongue which requires a vocabulary of 10,000 words. As in Chinese, inflection is very important. Few outsiders learn it, although a 'pidgin English' has sprung up which some explorers and missionaries mistake for the Eskimo language.

mos have known white men for nearly 900 years, but there are still, in some parts of the Arctic, Eskimos who have seen only an occasional explorer. White men's diseases have killed more than two-thirds of all Eskimos since the first contacts with them, but the population is now about stationary.

"Except in Alaska, Eskimos do not live along regular steamship or tourist routes. The Eskimo seldom can be induced to leave his northland, and the few who have been lured away have returned as quickly as possible."

THE WOMAN HE MARRIES

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Emeritus Dean of Men,
University of Illinois.

Girtan was talking to me about what he would do when he got out of college. He is a little uncertain about his future. It is not that he has done his work in differently. Quite the contrary. He has had a really distinguished record as a student, and shows ability in whatever he has undertaken to do. He has thought some of teaching, and if he should choose that profession he realizes that it will be quite necessary for him to go further in his education than a mere bachelor's degree. He has more than ordinary opportunities for entering business, and has given no little thought to doing that.

"You know I came from the farm," he said as we were talking, "and though I have done no specialization in agriculture I have a real interest in farming and a real desire to go back to the country. I like farm life. I enjoy the country and animals, and the open air. I know that there is no chance for a farmer to make a fortune, but farming is a healthy, honorable occupation and I often reach the conclusion that it is the life for me."

I have felt the same way, myself, so often that I could quite appreciate his point of view. There is much in farm life that I enjoy, and I know well the hard side of farming.

"I suppose I'm young to think about these things," he went on, "but I realize that what I go into and the success I make of it will depend very largely on the sort of woman I marry. You couldn't take every woman to the farm and make her happy or have her make you happy. There must be co-operation and sympathy between a farmer and his wife."

The woman a man marries does make a tremendous difference in what the man accomplishes.

Men everywhere are made or lost through the women they marry.

ANCIENTS MADE TEETH BRUSHING SOLEMN RITE

Indo-Europeans of 1700 B. C., Did a Thorough Job.

Chicago.—There is nothing modern about brushing of teeth, for the ancient Indo-Europeans of 1700 B. C. made a rite of this particular hygienic act, members of the American Oriental society, meeting at the Oriental institute of the University of Chicago were told. According to Dr. George V. Bobrinsky, assistant professor of Sanskrit at the university, the early Indians had no tooth paste, but they did a thorough job nevertheless.

For a toothbrush, the Indo-European user a twig taken from a living tree, a species of fig tree being recommended for the purpose. It was imperative that the bark remain on the twig. Another method was to chew twigs or sticks of certain varieties of trees. The "toothbrush" could be used but once, and then must be disposed of by leaving it in a clean place.

There was a long list of days when the rite must either be omitted or performed in a different manner, and in such cases the cleansing of the mouth by rinsing with twelve mouthfuls of water was substituted. The time of the rite was also prescribed, the teeth being cleaned just before the bath.

The size of the stick was rigidly specified, one authority giving the proper length as twelve angulas long, an angula being slightly less than an inch. Other authorities, however, specified various lengths for the various castes, the brahmanas using the longest, of ten angulas.

Various prayers were addressed to the cleansing stick both before and after its use, and Professor Bobrinsky translated one for the assembled Orientalists, as being: "Oh, Lord of the Forest, grant us long life, strength, glory, progeny, cattle, riches, and knowledge."

The dandadhavana is mentioned in early Buddhist literature, the words "toothpick," and "toothcleanser" appearing frequently. Professor Bobrinsky cited a passage which read: "There are five evils, O monks, resulting from the omission of the chewing of the tooth stick. Which five? It is detrimental to the eyesight; the mouth becomes evil smelling; the taste-conducting nerves of the tongue are not cleansed; bile, phlegm and food cover the tongue over, and one's meal does not please one."

"HERE'S A PAID TESTIMONIAL FOR TARGET!!!"

"I DIDN'T get a cent for writing this statement about Target Tobacco... but Target has saved me half a buck a week since I started using it, so you might call this a paid testimonial."

"Here's the answer. I switched to Target to save money. But I didn't know I was going to keep on enjoying real cigarette taste. Target is blended cigarette tobacco, just like the ready-mades. And it rolls up easy with those gummed papers you get free."

"So I advise you to spend a dime at your nearest dealer's and see for yourself. Just think, you get thirty or more cigarettes from every package."

AND GET THIS: The U. S. Government tax on 20 cigarettes amounts to 6¢. On 20 cigarettes you roll from Target Tobacco the tax is just about 1¢. No wonder you get such value for a dime!

Uncover Indians' Bones

Near Mountain View, Calif., where once the Fisher Indians buried their dead, a new highway cuts through, symbolic of the progress that drove the tribe from its once vast hunting ground. Road crews working on the new Bayshore highway recently uncovered the graves of five of the Indians, together with beads, mortars, and other paraphernalia buried with them to insure their happiness and comfort in the Happy Hunting Ground. The bones and other remnants were reburied alongside the right-of-way.

Beware of all vast schemes of reforming mankind. Such things are done piecemeal.

HE observance of Arbor day varies in the different states of the Union, although the majority of the celebrations are held during the latter part of April or the first part of May. But whatever the date, it has a special significance this year because of two men. For 1932 is the bicentennial of the birth of George Washington, the "Father of His Country," and the centennial of the birth of J. Sterling Morton, the "Father of Arbor Day."

The connection of George Washington with Arbor day celebrations lies in the fact that this year he has been the inspiration for the most extensive tree-planting program ever undertaken in this country. For a part of the general bicentennial celebration program this year has been the project, sponsored by the American Tree association of Washington, D. C., of planting 10,000,000 trees, all dedicated to Washington, a veritable living memorial stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian line to the Mexican border.

In announcing this project at the time that President Coolidge created the Washington bicentennial commission to have charge of the general celebration this year, Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree association, said:

"What more significant and unique method could be employed to manifest the affection which American feels for Washington? Washington himself must have loved trees, for his diary contains repeated references to their value and care; and he chose a spot for his home where their beauty is unexcelled. Along the shaded path that leads to his final resting place, two columns of trim, straight larches stand like sentinels, his constant companions, along with those thousands of Americans who come to pay him reverence during the daylight hours. He must have loved the regal beauty of a tree. In the symbolism of a tree can Washington be remembered pre-eminently. Deep-rooted in the ground, a tree is like a man, coming up out of the earth, but lifting its branches to heaven. And as it grows in usefulness, so it grows in beauty. It may outlast the ages, it offers its shade to all alike, and its disinterested ministries succor a thirsty countryside and provide for its physical and esthetic necessities. So a tree bespeaks the spirit of Washington. He was democratic in his services, regal in his leadership, commanding in his principles, while he extended a brotherly hand to a new and independent people struggling for fuller freedom."

Not only have millions of trees already been planted in honor of Washington and registered with the American Tree association by social, civic and patriotic clubs and organizations as well as by individuals, but the bicentennial tree planting idea has now gone around the world.

King Boris III of Bulgaria has joined this great tree planting army in honoring Washington by presenting to Henry W. Shoemaker, the American minister at Sofia, two very rare Balkan varieties of evergreens, one for the legation garden, the other for the American school near Sofia. These trees have been planted by Minister Shoemaker, who is from Pennsylvania, with the help of the legation staff and with I. Kerekoff of the Bulgarian foreign office representing that nation. Mrs. Shoemaker, Mrs. Maynard Barnes, Mrs. Frank Barnes, wives of the secretaries of the legation, and Mr. H. Frey, the king's landscape gardener, aided in the planting of the tree.

Joseph C. Grew, the American ambassador at Istanbul, Turkey, was the first representative of the American government in the foreign land to register on the national roll when he planted three black walnut trees with Eugene M. Hinkle signing the application on the national honor roll as a witness.

Following this came the registration of Fred Morris Dearing, American ambassador at Lima, Peru, who, with Garrett G. Ackerson, Jr., as a witness, planted a tree to mark the bicentennial of the birth of Washington at the Country club

1—J. Sterling Morton, the "Father of Arbor Day," born April 22, 1832.

2—Certificate issued to Joseph C. Grew, American ambassador to Turkey, for three trees planted in Istanbul, Turkey, in honor of George Washington.

3—Mrs. Herbert Hoover helping plant a cedar tree from the Ferry farm, where George Washington spent most of his boyhood days, as President Hoover and other government officials look on. The tree was presented to the President and his wife by the George Washington Tree Guild of Fredericksburg, Va., and was replanted on the White House grounds.

4—A tree, presented by King Boris III of Bulgaria was planted recently in the garden of the American legation at Sofia for the American Tree association with the help of (1) Henry Fry, the king's landscape gardener, (2) Henry Shoemaker, the American minister to Bulgaria, (3) Mrs. Henry Shoemaker and (4) I. Kerekoff of the Bulgarian foreign office, representing the Bulgarian government in the program honoring Washington.

at Lima. Another registration also came from F. E. Libenow, the consular agent at Charnaral, Chile, who planted six English walnuts there. From Cuba came the registration of Eugene E. Jova, the American consular agent at Sagua La Grande. Pompilio Montero, the director of the board of Sagua Yacht club and secretary of the Rotary club of Sagua la Grande, has also registered on the national honor roll. In the name of the Yacht club itself, Eduardo Radelat, Sr., the president of the club registered two trees. Eduardo Radelat, Jr., registered two more in his own name. Manuel Mill and A. M. Ribas have registered also.

Carlos Cunanan, ranger in the bureau of forestry of the agricultural college at Laguna, P. I., has registered the planting of a seedling he took from the Sierra Madre mountains and brought to Los Banos to acclimatize it. The tree has now been planted in the lowlands and is doing fine, he reports.

Paul E. Nilson of the American school at Talas, Turkey, has registered the planting of eight trees, and at his suggestion and that of Ambassador Grew, the American Tree association has sent the bicentennial tree planting message and its "Forestry Primer" to more than a score of schools in Turkey. These schools include the Constantinople Woman's college, Robert college, the American Academy for Girls, the American Boys' school, and Ihsan Bey, chairman of the council of education at Ankara. Ambassador Grew says there is a keen interest in tree planting of all kinds in Turkey.

There has been more than a hundred registrations from the Boy Scouts in Hawaii, and the library of the department of agriculture, Kyoto Imperial university, Kyoto, Japan, has asked for the bicentennial tree planting posters and printed matter for display.

On April 22, the date on which Nebraska celebrates Arbor day, the fame of one of her distinguished citizens went far beyond the borders of that state. For April 22, 1932, was the centennial of the birth of the "Father of Arbor Day" and a special commemorative stamp issue by the United States government, as well as special observances of the day in many parts of the country, recalled to all Americans their debt of gratitude to J. Sterling Morton.

Morton was born in Adams, Jefferson county, N. Y., on April 22, 1832. When he was two years old his parents moved to Michigan and there he grew up, attending a private school in Monroe and then a Methodist seminary in Albion. In 1850 he entered the University of Michigan and remained there for most of the course, but withdrew in his senior year and was graduated from Union college in his native state in 1854.

In the same year he was married to a Michigan girl and the young couple decided to "go West and grow up with the country." They settled first at Bellevue in the territory of Nebraska, but moved later to what is now Nebraska City, where Morton was a member of the town company, which surveyed and established that town. Adjacent to the townsite he pre-empted a tract of land half a mile square and upon that site he built his home which he called "Arbor Lodge."

Morton was the founder and first editor of the first newspaper in Nebraska City, the Nebraska City News and was a prominent figure in Nebraska during its territorial days. In 1858 President Buchanan made him secretary of the territory, and upon the resignation of Gov. William A. Richardson he became acting governor. He was, however, more interested in other matters than in politics. He was an original member of the Nebraska territorial board of agriculture and the Territorial Horticultural society. Coming from two heavily-wooded states, New York and Michigan, Morton was struck by the bleakness of the "treeless state," as Nebraska was called at that time.

The result was that at a meeting of the state board of agriculture on January 4, 1872, Morton introduced a resolution setting aside April 10 for tree planting so that Nebraska would be a "treeless state" no longer. More than a million trees were planted that year and several million more during the following years.

In 1885 the Nebraska legislature, wishing to further honor the man who had originated the idea of Arbor day, passed an act changing the date of its observance to April 22, Morton's birthday, and making it a legal holiday in that state. In 1893 Morton entered the cabinet of President Grover Cleveland as secretary of agriculture, remaining in office until 1897.

By 1895 the Nebraska legislature was able to proclaim to Nebraska's sister states that henceforth she was to be known as the "Tree-Planter State" because this commonwealth, which had once been so markedly destitute of this form of verdure, now had more than 700,000 acres planted in trees.

Arbor day is yet to be observed in a number of states and in all of them two names will figure prominently—George Washington, the "Father of His Country," and J. Sterling Morton, the "Father of Arbor Day." Among those (as this is written) are the following:

Alabama—Proclamation of the governor.
 Connecticut—Latter part of April or first part of May by proclamation of governor.
 Georgia—First Friday in December.
 Hawaii—First Friday in November.
 Idaho—April 29, when possible, recommended by governor.

Iowa—Proclamation of the governor.
 Kansas—Option of governor.
 Kentucky—In fall by proclamation of governor.

Maine—Option of governor in the spring.
 Massachusetts—Last Saturday in April, proclamation of governor.
 Mississippi—Second Friday in December. Proclamation by governor.

Montana—Second Tuesday in May.
 Nevada—Proclamation of governor.
 New Hampshire—Proclamation of governor, early May.

New York—The law in this state is very elastic in respect to Arbor day and permits of naming the date sectionally so as to take full advantage of climatic conditions in different parts of the state. Hence, there are three Arbor days in New York, one for Long Island, one for "up-state," and one for the northern counties. As a rule, the last Friday in April and the first two Fridays in May are the dates selected.

North Dakota—Option of governor.
 Ohio—Proclamation of governor.
 Pennsylvania—Proclamation of governor.
 Porto Rico—Last Friday in November.
 Rhode Island—Second Friday in May.
 South Carolina—Third Friday in November.
 Virginia—Proclamation of the governor in the spring.

Wisconsin—Proclamation of governor. Usually first Friday in May.

Washington—Proclamation of governor. Usually first Friday in May.

Wyoming—Proclamation of governor. Usually first Friday in May.

Joe Palooka, Boxing Champ, Is Now Heard on the Air

Joe Palooka, that lovable boob of the prize ring and comic strip created by Ham Fisher, now comes to radio. Palooka, his fights and troubles and mixups, is being presented each Tuesday and Thursday at 6:45 p. m., EST, over the Columbia system.

The dumb, gentle but unbeatable boxing champ is portrayed by Ted Bergman, 200-pound Columbia actor who looks like a prize-fighter, in the fifteen-minute hilarious sketches adapted by Georgia Backus. His bold and wise-cracking manager, Knobby Walsh, is played by Frank Readick, 130-pound Thesplan. Ted Husing describes Joe's tremendous fight scenes and Harry von Zell announces the program.

MICROPHONICS

Charles Campbell, trombonist in Nat Shilkret's orchestra, was a member of George Olsen's band when that ensemble played over the first network in the history of broadcasting. It was in the days of carbon microphones and just before a program went on the air a production man would give the mike a few hammer blows in order to insure good reception. The trombonist recalls that none of his fellow musicians took the possibilities of network broadcasting very seriously that day. Now, by a strange irony, he plays in "Music That Satisfies" which is heard over the largest sponsored network in radio history.

If a man can't argue, he'll quarrel.

MOST "WRITTEN UP" HOME IN AMERICA

Enormous Amount of White House Literature.

Legends and history of the White House are rapidly assuming such proportions that there can be little doubt it has become the "most written-up" building in America. The Washington bi-centenary observances this year have curiously served to stimulate a striking revival of interest in the White House, although Washington never lived in it—for the excellent reason that it was not finished in his time—and there is no historical foundation for the legend that he laid the cornerstone of it in 1792.

It has been noted by the officials of the Congressional library that any President's wife could find more reading matter about her official home on the shelves there than she could possibly read in four, or even eight years.

A summary of this official literature, just completed for the Woman's Home Companion, starts with the architectural contest for the plans for "the President's Palace," as it was at that time called. The contest was won by James Hoban, an Irishman from Charleston, S. C. The building was finished in time for the first Adams family to spend three months in it.

Then came President Jefferson and his daughters, followed by the reign of Dolly Madison, the sprightly Quakeress, climaxed by her escape from the house just before a British admiral burned it in the War of 1812.

The legend of Mrs. Madison holding the fort till the last minute and then calmly leaving with her carriage full of state papers and the Presidential silver, and sending into safe-keeping the portrait of George Washington, turns out to be true, fully proved by official documents. She returned 48 hours later, to find the President's house, as she called it, a smoke-blackened ruin.

The present name of the house, it develops, goes back to those smoke-blackened walls. They were painted white to cover the stains of the smoke, when the building was rebuilt by Hoban, following closely the original plans.

Tut's Caricature Found

Some ancient-time sculptor conceived the idea that a bust of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at shaving time would create a laugh. It is doing so now, for an amusing caricature of the king, his beard bristling and soapy, has been discovered at his burial place at Tek-el-Amarna, according to a report from Cairo, Egypt. A painting outfit also found, may have been the king's own.

MANY LETTERS addressed to you personally

Think of the advertisements in this paper as so many letters addressed to you, personally. That's what they're intended to be, and, actually, that's what they are. This newspaper is, in effect, a mail-bag which brings you news of events and news of the best merchandise at the fairest prices.

You don't throw away letters unread. You don't read three or four letters carefully and skim through the rest. Treat the "merchandise letters" in this newspaper the same way. Read them all. Read them carefully. One single item will often repay you for the time it has taken to read them all.

Many good housekeepers have formed the habit of reading their newspaper with a pencil and paper, ready to jot down the articles they wish to look at when they start out on their shopping tour. Try this method. It saves time, and saves money, and provides you with the pick of the day's merchandise.

Every advertisement has a message all its own.
